The Grub-ſtreet Journal. NUMB. 408.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1737.

To the Select Society of Grub-ſtreet.

Gentlemen,

ONE of the principal deſigns of your Society being, as we have gathered from your Papers, to expoſe the Diſguiſers of Truth, not to countenance them; we doubt not but you will publiſh the following Letters in juſtification of an honourable Proteſtant Gentleman, whoſe character has been falſly aſperſed by E. O. in ſome of your late Journals.

WILLIAM PENN to Dr. TILLOTSON.

Worthy Friend,

BEING often told that Dr. TILLOTSON ſhould ſuſpect me, and ſo report me a Papiſt, I think a Jeſuit, and being cloſely preſt, I take the liberty to ask thee, if any ſuch reflection fell from thee? If it did, I am ſorry one I eſteemed ever the firſt of his robe, ſhould ſo undeſervedly ſtain me, for ſo I call it; and if the ſtory be falſe, I am ſorry they ſhould abuſe Dr. TILLOTSON as well as myſelf without a cauſe. I add no more, but that I abhor two principles in Religion, and pity them that own them. The firſt is, Obedience upon authority without conviction; and the other, Deſtroying them that differ from me for God's ſake. Such a Religion is without judgment, though not without teeth: Union is beſt, if right; elſe Charity: and, as HOOKER ſaid, the time will come, when a few words ſpoken with meekneſs, and humility, and love, ſhall be more acceptable than volumes of controverſies; which commonly deſtroy Charity, the very beſt part of the true Religion: I mean not a Charity that can change with all, but bear all, as I can Dr. TILLOTSON in what he diſſents from me, and in this reflection too, if ſaid, which is not yet believ'd by

Thy Chriſtian true friend,

Dr. TILLOTSON to W. PENN.

Jan. 26, 1685.

Honoured Sir,

The demand of your Letter is very juſt and reaſonable, and the manner of it very kind, therefore in anſwer to it, be pleaſed to take the following account. The laſt time you did me the favour to ſee me at my houſe, I did, according to the freedom I always uſe, where I profeſs any friendſhip, acquaint you with ſomething I had heard of a correſpondence you held with ſome at Rome, and particularly with ſome of the Jeſuits there. At which you ſeemed a little ſurprized, and after ſome general diſcourſe about it, you ſaid, You would call on me ſome other time, and ſpeak farther of it: ſince that time I never ſaw you but by accident and in paſſage, where I thought, you always declined me; particularly at Sir WILLIAM JONES's Chamber, which was the laſt time, I think, I ſaw you; upon which occaſion I took notice to him, of your ſtrangeneſs to me, and told him what I thought might be the reaſon of it, and that I was ſorry for it, becauſe I had a particular eſteem of your parts and temper. The ſame, I believe, I have ſaid to ſome others, but to whom I do not ſo particularly remember. Since your going to Penſylvania, I never thought more of it, 'till lately being in ſome company, one of them preſſed me to declare, Whether I had not heard ſomething of you, which had ſatisfied me that you were a Papiſt? I anſwered, No, by no means. I told him what I had heard, and what I ſaid to you, and of the ſtrangeneſs that enſued upon it; but that this never went farther with me, than to make me ſuſpect there was more in that report which I had heard, than I was at firſt willing to believe; and that if any made more of it, I ſhould look upon them as very injurious both to Mr. PENN and myſelf.

'This is the truth of that matter, and whenever you will pleaſe to ſatisfy me, that my ſuſpicion of the truth of that report I had heard was groundleſs, I will heartily beg your pardon for it. I do fully concur with you in the abhorrence of the two Principles you mention, and in your approbation of that excellent ſaying of Mr. HOOKER's, for which I ſhall ever highly eſteem him. I have endeavoured to make it one of the governing Principles of my life, never to abate any thing of Humanity or Charity, to any man for his difference from me in opinion, and particularly to thoſe of your perſuaſion, as ſeveral of them have had experience. I have been ready upon all occaſions to do all offices of kindneſs, being truly ſorry to ſee them ſo hardly uſed; and tho' I thought them miſtaken, yet in the main I believed them to be very honeſt: I thank you for your Letter, and have a juſt eſteem of the Chriſtian temper of it, and reſt

Your faithful friend,

J. TILLOTSON.

W. PENN to Dr. TILLOTSON.

Worthy Friend,

Having a much leſs opinion of my own memory, than of Dr. TILLOTSON's truth, I will allow the fact, though not the jealouſy: for beſides that I can't look ſtrange where I am well uſed; I have ever treated the name of Dr. TILLOTSON with another regard: I might be grave, and full of my own buſineſs; I was alſo then diſappointed by the Doctors; but my nature is not harſh, my education leſs, and my principle leaſt of all. 'Twas the opinion I have had of the Doctor's Moderation, Simplicity, and Integrity, rather than his parts, or poſt, that always made me ſet a value upon his friendſhip, of which, perhaps, I am a better judge, leaving the latter to men of deeper talents. I blame him nothing, but leave it to his better thoughts, if, in my affair, his jealouſy was not too nimble for his charity. If he can believe me, I ſhould hardly prevail with myſelf to endure the ſame thought of Dr. TILLOTSON on the like occaſion, and leſs to ſpeak of it. For the Roman Correſpondence I will freely come to confeſſion: I have not only no ſuch thing with any Jeſuit at Rome (tho' Proteſtants may have without offence) but I hold none with any Jeſuit, Prieſt, or Regular in the world of that Communion. And that the Doctor may ſee what a novice I am in that buſineſs, I know not one any where. And yet, when all this is ſaid, I am a Catholick, tho' not a Roman. I have bowels for mankind, and dare not deny others what I crave for myſelf, I mean, Liberty for the exerciſe of my Religion; thinking Faith, Piety, and Providence, a better ſecurity than Force, and that if Truth cannot prevail with her own weapons, all others will fail her. Now, though I am not obliged to this Defence, and that it can be no temporizing now to make it, yet that Dr. TILLOTSON may ſee how much I value his good opinion, and dare own the truth and myſelf at all turns, let him be confident, I am no Roman Catholick, but a Chriſtian, whoſe Creed is the Scripture, of the truth of which, I hold a nobler evidence, than the beſt Church authority in the world; and yet I refuſe not to believe the Porter, tho' I can't leave the ſenſe to his diſcretion; and when I ſhould, if he offends againſt thoſe plain methods of underſtanding God hath made us to know things by, and which are inſeparable from us, I muſt beg his pardon; as I do the Doctor's for this length, upon the aſſurance he has given me of his doing the like upon better information; which, that he may fully have, I recommend him to my Addreſs to Proteſtants, from pag. 133, to the end, and to the four firſt chapters of my No Croſs, No Crown; to ſay nothing of our moſt inceremonious and unworldly way of worſhip, and their pompous cult; where at this time I ſhall leave the buſineſs, with all due and ſenſible acknowledgments to thy friendly temper, and aſſurance of the ſincere wiſhes and reſpects of

Thy affectionate real friend,

W. PENN to Dr. TILLOTSON.

Charing-croſs, 27th of 2d month, 1686.

Worthy Friend,

This ſhould have been a viſit, but being of opinion, that Dr. TILLOTSON is yet a debtor to me this way, I choſe to provoke him to another Letter by this, before I made him one: for tho' he was very juſt and obliging when I laſt ſaw him, yet certainly no expreſſion, however kindly ſpoken, will ſo eaſily and effectually purge me from the unjuſt imputation ſome people caſt upon me in his name, as his Letter will do. The need of this he will better ſee when he has read the incloſed, which coming to hand ſince my laſt, is, I preſume, enough to juſtify this addreſs, if I had no former pretenſions: and therefore I cannot be ſo wanting to myſelf, as not to preſs him to a Letter in my juſt defence; nor ſo uncharitable to him, as to think he ſhould not frankly write what he has ſaid, when it is to right a man's reputation, and diſabuſe the too credulous world. For to me it ſeems from a private friendſhip, to become a moral duty to the publick, which, with a perſon of ſo great morality, muſt give ſucceſs to the reaſonable deſire of

Thy very real friend,

W. PENN.

Dr. TILLOTSON to W. PENN.

April the 29th, 1686.

SIR,

I am very ſorry, that the ſuſpicion which I had entertained concerning you, of which I gave you the true account in my former Letter, hath occaſioned ſo much trouble and inconvenience to you: and I do now declare with great joy, that I am fully ſatisfied that there was no juſt ground for that ſuſpicion, and therefore I do heartily beg your pardon for it. And ever ſince you were pleaſed to give me that ſatisfaction, I have taken all occaſions to vindicate you in this matter; and ſhall be ready to do it, to the perſon that ſent you the incloſed, whenever he will pleaſe to come to me. I am very much in the country, but will ſeek the firſt opportunity to viſit you at Charing-croſs, and renew our acquaintance, in which I took great pleaſure. I reſt

Your faithful friend,

J. TILLOTSON.

To the foregoing Letters, add the following Extract from a Letter written by W. PENN, dated October the 24th, 1688, viz. 'Becauſe ſome people are ſo unjuſt, 'as to render inſtances for my Popery, (or rather Hypo-'cryſie, for ſo it would be in me) 'tis fit I contradict 'them as particularly as they accuſe me. I ſay then ſo-'lemnly, That I am ſo far from being bred at St. Omer's, 'and having received orders at Rome, that I never was 'at either place, nor do I know any body there; nor had 'I ever a correſpondency with any body in thoſe places, 'which is another ſtory invented againſt me. And as 'for my officiating in the King's chapel, or any other, 'it is a ſtory ſo ridiculous, as well as untrue, that beſides 'that no body can do it but a Prieſt, and that I have 'been married to a woman of ſome condition above 'ſixteen years, which no Prieſt can be, by any diſpenſa-'tion whatever: I have not ſo much as looked into any 'chapel of the Roman Religion, and conſequently not 'the King's, though a common curioſity warrants it 'daily to people of all perſuaſions.

'And once for all, I do ſay, that I am a Proteſtant 'Diſſenter, and to that degree ſuch, that I challenge the 'moſt celebrated Proteſtant of the Engliſh church, or 'any other, on that head, be he Layman, or Clergyman, 'in publick or in private.'

If your Correſpondent E. O. knew any thing of theſe Letters, he is an inexcuſable Calumniator; but if he plead ignorance of them, he is nevertheleſs to blame for reviving old confuted ſlanders without a proper enquiry.

WILLIAM PENN's works are extant in 2 Vols in folio, and the aforeſaid Letters are in Vol. I. p. 126, 127, 128, 129, 135. Let E. O. peruſe thoſe Works, and he may ſupply himſelf with more ſpecimens of the Quakers Orthodoxy, and of their ſincere belief both of the Divinity and Humanity of Chriſt, than perhaps he deſires to find: but to make his enquiry the more eaſy, I ſhall direct him to the following pages, Vol. I. p. 4, 166, 178, 208, 256, 257, 269, 286, 575, 581, 750, 860, 902. Vol. II. p. 14, 19, 66, 231, 281, 506, 785, 848, 849, 867, 869, 881.

The truth of the ſtory about JOHN MATTHEWS of Beedon, is, that, 'his father almoſt 40 (not almoſt 60) 'years ago, took the farm his ſon now lives in, of a 'perſon who had the impropriation of the great Tythe 'of part (not all) of the pariſh, held by 4 other perſons, 'who, and their ſucceſſors ever ſince, have paid an in-'variable ſum for the ſame, which, without getting one 'farthing thereby, his father and he have received of 'them and paid to their landlord, together with their 'own rent. So that they never rented, or took the 'Tythe to make any advantage to themſelves, but for

• their landlord's convenience;' nor have they given any juſt occaſion for that profane truth which E. O. has vented concerning them. I am

Her body was diſcover'd by a life-guardman who was airing his horſe. The husband returning home without her, gave a ſuſpicion to the other ſervants, (from ſome former circumſtances) that he had made away with his wife, and taxing him with it he immediately abſconded, and has not ſince been heard of. It is reported, the cauſe of his committing this barbarous villany, was his having poiſon'd two of his children ſome time ago, which ſhe threatened to diſcover in order for his proſecution. Gentlemen,

SOME Papers of a celebrated Poet lately deceas'd, coming to my hands, I have taken the liberty to ſend you the enclos'd Copies, which are of his hand-writing; and therefore I ſuppoſe them his own compoſitions. Whether he had finiſh'd them to his mind or not, I cannot ſay; but it is plain, that either he had not, or elſe had ſome other reaſon which induc'd him not to make them publick: and on that ſcore I hold myſelf excus'd for not making his name ſo.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your conſtant reader,

Oct. 8, 1737. A. O. Anonymous.

The Burleſque Orator.

1.

Should fam'd Demosthenes ariſe,
And hear this ſolemn Prater;
His pert Harangues he would deſpiſe,
And damn the dull * O-ra-tor.

2.

Doſt thou not dread great Tully's Ghoſt,
And Pliny's injur'd ſhade;
Since eloquence, their greateſt boaſt,
Thou mak'ſt a Canting Trade?

3.

How cheap is Rhetoric become!
Figures and Tropes, how vile!
When you dare thrice a week hum drum,
In Non-conforming ſtile.

4.

No more expoſe to publick ſale
Nonſenſe with bombaſt full:
Like windy froth of bottl.d ale,
Still empty, pert, and dull.

5.

To Amphitheatre of Figg,
With noiſy flouriſh goe:
In lofty Language there talk big,
And prologue in the Show.

6.

Right well thy buskin'd ſtrains will ſute
With brothers of the blade:
Or, whilſt the dogs and bear diſpute,
Be Moderator made.

7.

Clare-market then from ev'ry ſtall
Shall ſend her butchers forth;
And each blue frock of Leaden-hall
Adore thy gifted worth.

8.

But ſacred ſubjects lay aſide,
O Harlequin Divine:
Nor in burleſquing Scripture pride,
With thy unhallow'd whine.

9.

What tho' Non-Cons their barns ſtill keep,
And through the vocal noſe
Do tune their gentle flocks aſleep,
With opiated proſe?

10.

Thy Nonſenſe-tub gives more offence
To all well-judging men:
Where greaſy butchers ſnore for pence,
And bull dogs ſnarl Amen.

* N. B. -ra, in modern Orator is long; vide Durfey's Plays, T—b—ld's Tranſlations, Den—s Criticiſms, H—lx's Lectures.

The Author of the Letter ſigned J. G. in our laſt, has promiſed to give a more particular account of the arbitrary and mercenary conduct of a principal Manager in the London Evening Poſt, that profeſt Liber-Proper-ty-Country-intereſted Paper, not forgetting the London Daily Poſt; and we have ſo good an opinion of the ſtrength of our Author's teeth, that we cannot think he will prove a mere Cracker, but depend upon his ſhewing himſelf a Nutt-Cracker too, tho' the ſhell be ever ſo thick.

Since our laſt, we have received Obſervations on Mr. Dale's new edition of his Pharmacologia, A Letter from Mr. Knowman, another from John Huddleſtone, two Copies of Verſes from A. O. Anonymous, and a Copy intitled The Orator.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Tuesday, Oct. 18. They write from Paris, that the French Ambaſſador at Turin had earneſtly ſollicited the King of Sardinia to accede formally to the Treaty between the Emperor and the King of France, and had even ſignify'd, that the King his maſter was greatly diſſatisfy'd with the delays uſed by his Sardinian Majeſty on that occaſion, as it was in a great meaſure the cauſe of the King of Spain's refuſing to accede thereto. The Marquis d'Ormea, Secretary of the Court of Turin, having given a verbal anſwer to this Ambaſſador, no way ſatisfactory, he demanded that an anſwer in writing ſhould be deliver'd him, which was afterwards done, and is as follows. The King of Sardinia, after having maturely reflected on the inſtances of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, to induce him to accede to this new Treaty, has thought fit to remark, that it was in vain to expect his acceſſion to the ſaid Treaty, until the conditions ſtipulated therein in favour of his Sardinian Majeſty ſhould be executed. That it's well known, that tho' the King of Sardinia has indeed been put into poſſeſſion of the greateſt part of the territories which were yielded up to him by the peace, yet his pretenſions to Serravalla, and to other diſtricts of the Lumellina, remain yet to be diſcuſſed. That his Sardinian Majeſty has been far from neglecting to make neceſſary inſtances in relation to this ſubject to the Courts of Vienna and France, and ſtill continues to entreat them to determine this affair with all poſſible expedition; and that as ſoon as proper regard ſhall have been had to his juſt demand, his Sardinian Majeſty will no longer make any difficulty to conſummate by his acceſſion what is wanting on his part in the new Treaty. DA.

1. Whether any Man may chuſe his own Religion, or depend on others to chuſe it for him.

3 Whether all ſupreme Powers, who are firmly perſuaded that they are of the Orthodox Religion, have Authority from God to oblige their Subjects o enly to profeſs the ſame by Sanctions of Rewards and Puniſhments.
